AVONGARA MAHA GANY

Description accompanying BCOA application for submitting Native Stock

Gany has a strong topline [which has been an African import weak point], great front assembly, good tailset, but carries it loosely curled over his back to one side [which has also been an import weak point]. He has good proportions, and is true coming and going. From the ASE 2011 video and photos, you can see that he has a happy confidence and moves out with ease. He has a nice head [although the paralysis of one half his face makes an odd expression that will advance with age. He was tested for Degenerative Myelopathy and was normal for any genetic spinal problem, but the paralysis persists], good bite, good wrinkle, with lovely small, highset ears [although one ear on the opposite side from the face paralysis is also paralyzed]. Gany's genetic diversity is his greatest asset, while his wonderful temperament can only benefit the breed. He is missing toes with much scar tissue on his back feet and has burn scars up and down his legs that are quite large and noticeable. His offspring and their offspring, further prove that he is definitely Basenji and produces very nice puppies bred full Avongara. He is in a pet home and is overweight which accounts for not being able to get better photos that show his attributes well. The photos and video from the ASE 2011 National show a true Basenji that offers much positive characteristics for the breed, especially with the current escalation of fighting and war in the DRC.
